DETAILED ACTION

Drawings

1. The drawings were received on 04 October 2006. These drawings are accepted.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-4 and 6-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Colting, US #5,125,177 in view of Vicino, US Re 33,709.
3. Colting teaches a cold air inflatable display including a hollow body figure (Figure 1) and interchangeable fan assembly having housing 25 and secured in an opening (of matching dimensions) in the body by male and female zipper portions 23. Figure 2 also shows a cord for providing power to the display. The fan assembly is positioned in a lower backside above the surface touching bottom of the body (Figure 2).
4. Colting does not teach using fabric or illuminating the display. Vicino teaches an inflatable display that may be made from woven fabric (column 2 line 21). It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art to utilize woven fabric to create the display of Colting to provide a well known, inexpensive material to create the display. Vicino teaches light fixtures 17 (having protective covers) for illuminating the display. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill to utilize illumination in the display of Colting so that the display may be seen at night.

Art Unit: 3611

5. Colting and Vicino do not specifically teach the power cord from the lights as being attached to the power cord for the fans, however it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to utilize such an arrangement of cords if this provides the safest, most efficient use of power.

6. Colting and Vicino do not teach using three fans, however this is considered to be a duplication of known parts. It has been held that mere duplication of the essential working parts of a device involves only routine skill in the art. St. Regis Paper Co. v. Bemis Co., 193 USPQ 8. Also, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill to utilize additional fans if more air flow is necessary.

7. Colting and Vicino do not specifically teach the method steps of the instant claims, however such steps (interchanging displays, unplugging power cords, etc.) would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill given the disclosures of Colting and Vicino.

Response to Arguments

8. Applicant's arguments filed 04 October 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

9. As discussed above, and shown by Colting, Figure 2, the fan is secured to the inflatable display above the surface touching bottom and without a base support. Lower portion 12 of Colting is part of the inflated display (column 2 lines 1-3). Applicant argues that Colting teaches a base container, however the embodiment shown in Figure 2 uses an inflatable base.

10. Applicant also argues that there is no motivation to combine the cited references. As above, in Figure 2 Colting teaches a display which is entirely inflatable. This embodiment of Colting does not teach away from using a fabric.

Conclusion

11. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).
